

Download What Do You Really Want For Your Children

If you have children, then you have dreams for them. You want to see them growing up happy, healthy, self-reliant, and confident in themselves and their abilities. If this is what you really want for your children then there's no excuse why it can't be realistic. Let's talk about "no limits," because people are likely to misunderstand this concept when related to child-rearing. Well-known pop psychologist Dyer (Your Erroneous Zones) coaches parents in raising "no-limit" (emotionally healthy) children. In an admittedly repetitious but highly readable style, he covers topics like risk-taking, living in the present, self-reliance, and creativity. What do you think matters most to your children? You driving them to lessons and practices, or is it the smile and hug you greet them with after school? If you guessed the latter, you are correct. Sixteen years of teaching and giving the same assignment every Mother's Day has led me to the exact same conclusion.